These are also the topics that will be used as a basis for speaking exercises.</li> <li>Listening skills will be practised by means of authentic listening fragments.</li> <li>Participants that would like to improve their writing skills further will have the possibility to write a cover letter and a personal reaction to a letter with an advice request.</li> <li>Reading skills will be focused on the least in this course.</li> </ul>
	Medical French This course is aimed at doctors (in training) who want to improve their French language proficiency, as needed on the job. The course mainly focuses on expanding your vocabulary range and on improving your ability to communicate with colleagues and patients in French. You build a broad range of specific medical vocabulary (anatomy, diseases, treatments, etc.) by means of extensive vocabulary lists and exercises. From time to time, listening exercises will also be included. The conversational situations used during these sessions concern the professional communication between healthcare providers/patients and among the healthcare providers themselves, which try to approach reality as much as possible. You will also learn specific grammatical items which are important in these settings and relationships (question/answer; instructions; wish and subjunctive; a necessity or a feeling; comparisons; time indicators, etc.). In class and in the course materials, we use a contrastive approach (Dutch - French). For this reason the course targets native speakers (or near native speakers) of Dutch.
	Legal French This course teaches participants to read, independently process and write French texts but also focusses on speaking skills in a broad legal context. Legal doctrine, jurisprudence as well as legislation are dealt with. The legal texts and themes have been selected in close consultation with professors and research assistants. On the one hand, your reading skills will be further developed by making use of authentic texts (e.g. decrees, contracts, etc.). On the other hand, your writing skills will also be enhanced. You will learn how to write correct English texts paying attention to style, register, coherence, and grammatical correctness. You will also
